“Fabric #1

Beauty Is in the Eye of the Debugger #3”

2021 / 2024

Single Board Computer, C++ Code,
LCD screen, Camera, Acrylic,
Digital Projection

These two interactive installation works try to show how technological systems mediate perception and construct reality. Fabric #1 draws on theories of relativity and higher dimensions, translating the immediate presence of the audience and the exhibition space into shifting three-dimensional forms. This gesture reflects an attempt to imagine dimensions beyond the linear space and time of everyday experience. Beauty Is in the Eye of the Debugger #3 is translation on the computational act of seeing, presenting real-time camera data as pixel-based visualizations that reveal how machines register the world differently from humans. Together, the works situate the tension between human imagination, scientific speculation, and machine perception.

Both works are part of an ongoing series that foregrounds the audience and the exhibition site as essential subjects. Here, the artist deliberately relinquishes full authority over the final visual outcome, allowing it instead to emerge from the contingencies of audience presence and interaction. In doing so, the works emphasize an open-ended authorship where art world is co-produced within the act of viewing and appreciation between agents.
